By way of comparison, your Committee finds that the salaries of the National bank examiners in Pennsylvania and other states are considerably higher than those of the Banking Department examiners. (Reference may be made to the answer to Question 10, in the questionnaire attached hereto, or definite figures.) The salaries paid to the State bank examiners compare so unfavorably with the salaries of the National bank examiners, as to make it difficult for the Banking Department to obtain and keep a sufficient number of competent and qualified men for these positions.

6. It is further evident that the present Commissioner and his predecessor have not had, under existing law, the opportunity to obtain a sufficient number of deputy commissioners, upon an adequate basis of compensation, to permit a supervision of the work being done in the Department commensurate with the rapidly increasing burden placed upon the Department by law and the growth of new banking institutions in the State.

Again, the Commissioner has been further handicapped in his efforts to obtain a sufficient number of adequately paid bank examiners, because of the fact that under the present law these examiners would be working under the direction of a deputy commissioner receiving a salary less than that of the examiner whom he directs. For these reasons it has been found difficult for the Commissioner to fill the office of Third Deputy Commissioner. He is also handicapped by having men, who are appointed, offered larger compensation by banking institutions throughout the State. It has, therefore become imperative to so increase the compensation of the Third Deputy Commissioner, in the Department of Banking as to meet these objections. To remedy this situation amendments have been offered to Senate Bill No. 163, increasing the salaries of the deputy commissioners. This bill has passed the Senate, has been amended by the Committee on Banks and Banking in the House, and is now on the calendar.

7. Before the defalcation at the City Bank of York was discovered, the Commissioner had already begun to improve and perfect the system of examinations of State banking institutions, as evidenced by his answer to Question No. 13, propounded by the Committee. More extensive instructions to the examiners, in a thoroughly modernized form, are at the present time in the hands of the printer.

Upon such investigation as your Committee has been able to make, supplemented by the personal experience of members thereof, who are connected with State banking institutions, it is felt that the State Banking Commissioner and his predecessor have done all that could reasonably be expected of them, in view of the limitations imposed upon them and more particularly referred to elsewhere in this report.

In view of the foregoing facts, your Committee respectfully makes the following

Recommendations:

1. That the House give immediate and earnest consideration to Senate Bill No. 163, House Bill No. 1461, relating to the organization and maintenance of the Banking Department, which is on the calendar to-day, particularly calling attention to the section entitled "Deputies." This will enable the Commissioner immediately to reorganize his Department, not only in the personnel of the deputy commissioners but by properly increasing the numbers and the compensation of the examiners and their assistants.

2. For the better protection of the depositors throughout the State, your Committee recommends not only that the new set of instructions about to be issued by the Commissioner to his examiners be put into full force, but that the examiners as a part of their duties, carefully investigate the methods of bookkeeping employed by each individual bank examined and report to the Commissioner, who, in turn, shall notify each director and officer of the bank requiring the same to modernize and standardize, as nearly as may be, its system of bookkeeping.

3. That there be established in each banking institution, under the direction of the Commissioner, such a system of control of the banking operations as will enable the directors and, therefore, the Department to effect a system of checking and counter-checking the work done by the various employees and officers of the bank.

4. It is also deemed advisable that the Commissioner compile for the use of directors and officers of banks, subject to the supervision of his Department, a book of instructions which will set forth the requirements of existing laws and of the best banking practice. This should include definite advice as to the most efficient method of audits of the banks by the directors themselves.

Your Committee feels that it should conclude its findings of facts with this statement: From such investigation as they have been able to make, and after an extended examination of employees of the Bank and conferences with the directors thereof, they are unanimously of the opinion that the directors, as such, and the finance committee of the Board, gave to the management of their institution that degree of time and attention to duties which is usually found in institutions of like character and size.

In submitting this report your Committee believe that they have fully and expeditiously carried out the true intent of Resolution No. 17.

Harrisburg, May 7th, 1923.

Hon. Wallace Bromley, Chairman, Sub-Committee of the House Committee on Banks and Banking, House of Representatives.

Sir: In response to the questions propounded by your Committee, under date of May 2nd, 1923, with respect to the recent failure of the City Bank of York, Pennsylvania, and more especially with reference to the general condition of bank examinations in the State, I have the honor to submit, hereto attached, under separate heads, answers to each question consecutively, except that questions 8 and 9 are answered under the same head.

Respectfully,

PETER G. CAMERON,
Commissioner of Banking.

NUMBER TWO.

Q. If you have the data available without too much loss of time, let us have the reports made by the examiner, covering this institution.

A. The reports of every examination that has been made of the City Bank of York, Pennsylvania, are on file in this office and are at your disposal.

NUMBER THREE.

Beginning with 1919, when you changed your practice relating to examinations, let us have the exact time consumed in each examination and the number of examiners.

Examination as of Nov. 24, 1919:—

H. R. Moyer 7 days
Thos. Dixon 6 days

Examination as of Feb. 23, 1921:—

L. W. Dennison 5 days
W. H. Anstine 4½ days

NUMBER FOUR.

Q. Will your reports show what, if any, officials and directors were consulted by your examiners? If so, please give us this information.

A. For answer to this please see the answer to Question Number Sixteen.

NUMBER FIVE.

Q. Your present regulations call for two examinations a year. Why has no examination been made of the City Bank of York for two years?

A. The assigning of institutions to examiners for examination has been one of the duties of First Deputy Commissioner John W. Morrison since the creation of the Department in 1895. The integrity of Captain Morrison, and his familiarity with the banking laws and Departmental rulings, are well known throughout the State. In response to my request to answer question No. 5, Captain Morrison writes as follows:

"In response to your request for an answer to Question 5, asked by the Committee of the House of Representatives, appointed to investigate the Banking Department, I take pleasure in submitting the following:

"While it is true that the Act of May 21, 1919, provides for two examinations of the banks and trust companies under the supervision of the Banking Department, I have to say that it is a physical impossibility to comply therewith, by reason of the number of these institutions in existence when the act went into effect, and by reason of the large number due for examinations inherited from a former administration. Since May 1919, there have been incorporated 101 banks and 107 trust companies—these added to the burden of the Department. At the present time there are under its care 10 Savings Banks, 317 Banks of Discount and Deposit, 405 Trust Companies, 99 Private Banks and 90 National Banks doing a fiduciary business.

"In this connection and for the consideration of the committee, attention is called to the increase of the assets of the institutions between 1919 and 1923, all of which assets must be physically handled by the examiners in making their examinations: to wit,—

	1919	1923	Increase
Assets .	$2,036,174,047.70	$2,500,364,644.41	$464,190,596.71
Trust Funds	1,588,309,927.65	2,163,300,069.70	574,990,142.05
Corporate Trusts	4,387,843,821.18	4,993,544,154.85	- 605,700,333.67

"With reference to why the City Bank of York has not been examined for two years, I have to say that it was examined as frequently as other banks in the State, and for the information of yourself and the committee, I attach hereto a list of all of the examinations made of the City Bank of York, from 1895 to the present time.

"This bank was assigned to Mr. L. W. Dennison on January 25, 1921, together with other institutions in York City and Dauphin County. The examination was made as of February 23, 1921. On February 7, 1923, this bank, with others, was assigned for examination to Mr. C. A. Steele. Before he reached this institution he was called on urgent business to the western part of the State. This bank, with the others, was then assigned for examination to Mr. J. A. Taylor, but before the examination of corporations assigned to him in and near Pittsburgh was completed he was sent as Special Deputy to wind up the business of the Honesdale Bank. These banks were then transferred from Mr. Taylor to Mr. Ferguson on April 9, 1923. A special case requiring instant attention, not a great distance from this city, prevented his going to York, which place he reached on April 20, 1923.

"It is customary for the Department to make extra examinations where the reports of examiners call for specific attention to any irregularities or criticize lax methods in the conduct of business, but the report of the last examination of the City Bank of York was absolutely free of any matter requiring the attention of the Commissioner.

"Personally, I did not digest the report. This, I think, was done by the then Commissioner of Banking, but I have read it and there were only minor matters mentioned, to which the attention of the officers and directors was called in a letter from the Banking Department.

Very truly yours,

(Signed) JOHN W. MORRISON,
First Deputy Commissioner."

With respect to lack of examiners, it should be borne in mind that I have been Commissioner of Banking but ten months, six of which were the closing months of a former Administration, and four, the past four busy months of the present Administration.

At the same time I want it understood that I am endeavoring to carry out the policies of my predecessor, John S. Fisher, who, in my opinion, did more during the three and a half years of his incumbency to improve the efficiency of the Department than any former Commissioner.

Since I became Commissioner, I have appointed eight bank examiners and three examiner's clerks; six bank examiners have resigned to accept better positions; two have died; four have been appointed Special Deputy as Agent to assist me in liquidating insolvent institutions; one examiner and one clerk have been assigned to assist the Special Deputies in these liquidations; and one examiner has been brought into the office to assist me in various ways, pending the passage of Senate Bill Number 163, in event of which I expect to appoint him Third Deputy Commissioner.

The difficulty of securing and retaining the services of competent men as examiners may be attributed to various causes.

Certainly, it would be unwise to appoint as an examiner a man who had not a number of years of practical banking experience, who had not a comprehensive knowledge of general accounting methods, a thorough understanding of banking and commercial law, and a character for honesty and integrity beyond question. Men having these qualifications are usually settled in well-paying positions in which there are prospects of advancement; they are usually men of family who do not desire to spend so large a part of their time away from home as is required of bank examiners, and men who hesitate to give up a reasonable certainty of permanent employment for the uncertain tenure of a so-called political position.

While many applications for appointment to bank examinations are filed in this office, the applicants are generally found, upon investigation, to lack the requisite qualifications. A number of men who have been offered appointments declined to accept for one or another of the reasons above given.

That a very material expansion of the examining force was imperative, was apparent to me for some time prior to my appointment. It is natural that a Commissioner should desire to restrict examiners' salaries as much as possible in an effort to render an economical administration; but I am convinced that it will be impossible to expand the examining force to the required number without a very substantial increase in the salaries paid the several grades of examiners, i. e., Junior Examiners, Examiners and Senior Examiners the present salaries of which are $2,400.00, $3,000.00 and $3,600.00, respectively. I shall have no hesitancy in taking this action, inasmuch as the institutions under the supervision of the Department pay the salaries of the examiners, and I am in receipt of assurances from many institutions that they are in accord with my present purpose to so increase the force as to render it possible to make at least one thorough, complete audit each year of every institution under the supervision of the Department.

As to the duties laid upon the Commissioner of Banking to examine banks, trust companies and private bankers twice in each year, permit me to say that I know of no other state that requires more than one examination each year to be made of institutions of these classes, and it is my opinion that one thorough examination each year, by the Banking Department, is sufficient, except in such instances as unsatisfactory conditions are revealed, when frequent examinations should be made until the conditions are satisfactory. I am drawn to this opinion by the fact that nearly all banks and trust companies not only have an annual audit by certified public accountants, but have at least one audit by a committee of the stockholders or the board of directors. The institutions in the larger cities are also subjected to examinations by the Clearing House examiners. State institutions that are members of a Federal Reserve Bank are subjected to examinations by the Federal Reserve authorities. Trust companies engaged in fiduciary business are also examined by experts appointed by the Orphans' Courts of the respective counties. In view of this multiplicity of examinations, it seems to me one thorough examination each year, by this Department, should be sufficient.

That this opinion is concurred in by the Commission to Codify and Revise the Laws Relating to Banks, etc., is evidenced by their recommendation to the Legislature of 1921 that the Banking Department Act of 1919 be amended so as to require but one examination each year, and by the renewal of this recommendation as provided by Clause A of Section 14 of Senate Bill Number 163, File Folio 2059, which is now under consideration by your Honorable Committee.

Permit me to state that no number of examinations is likely to reveal embezzlements or misapplication of funds unless the examination is thorough in every detail and is participated in by sufficient examiners and examiners' clerks to cover every important record and asset of the bank immediately upon entering to begin the examination.

Bank examiners are not infallible, and it is possible for a dishonest bank official—especially if there is collusion between him and some other official or clerk—to cover a shortage indefinitely, unless all of the deposit pass books are called in and balanced, the maker and endorser of every note called on to verify their signatures, and the holders of every certificate of deposit requested to verify the amount of the certificate held by him. In several instances, where the state examiners proposed to take this action, the directors strenuously objected on the ground that such a course would arouse distrust on the part of the depositors and might result in a run which would necessitate the closing of the institution. Therefore, unless, and until, the public is educated to the imperative necessity of calling in pass books in connection with examinations, in order to make the examination complete, such a procedure is apt to prove detrimental to the institution under examination, and will no doubt be objected to by the officials when such action is proposed to be taken.

It should be borne in mind that the conditions revealed in the closing of the City Bank of York, Pennsylvania, are most unusual, and that failures of that magnitude are fortunately of rare occurrence. That conditions such as obtained in the City Bank of York, Pennsylvania, have existed in other institutions and have been concealed for long periods of time is recalled in connection with the failure a few years ago of the Allegheny National Bank of Pittsburgh, where a shortage of a million, five hundred thousand dollars was covered for many years, the Farmers and Drovers National Bank of Waynesburg, Pa., the First National Bank of Uniontown, the Enterprise National Bank of Pittsburgh and the Germar National Bank of Pittsburgh, all of which failed because of large cash shortages and misapplication of funds. The newspapers of Sunday, May 6, 1923, refer to the closing of the First National Bank of Columbia City, Indiana, in which an embezzlement of at least $350,000.00 has just been discovered.

The shortage in the City Bank of York, Pennsylvania, was concealed from the examiners time after time by withholding of a deposit ledger by the cashier, and the placing of forged notes for small amounts among the assets by the assistant cashier. By recourse to the withholding of a deposit ledger even the calling in of the pass books would not reveal the defalcation because no notice would be sent to the depositors whose names appeared in this ledger.

An examiner cannot be expected to know the signatures of the makers of promissory notes, and it is the custom of examiners to request the directors to examine the notes with them. The reports of former examinations of the city bank of York, Pennsylvania, show that this procedure was followed, the Executive Committee having been present during the examination of the notes.

It is worthy of note that the examiner who had charge of the last former examination of the City Bank of York, Pennsylvania, although he did not discover the existing shortage in that institution, did, shortly after, discover the defalcation which resulted in the closing of the Agricultural Trust Company at Lancaster.

NUMBER SIX.

Take by way of illustration the banks and trust companies of Dauphin County. How frequently have these institutions been examined within the last three years? Please let us have the same information, with respect to the State Banks and trust companies in a big city like Pittsburgh and counties like Greene, Monroe and Montgomery, during the past three years. If you have any more detailed information ready and available, relating to all of the counties for any period in recent years, we would, of course, be glad to have that.

NUMBER SEVEN.

How many State financial institutions are under the jurisdiction of your Department and require examinations, exclusive of building and loan associations? Will you subdivide your answers into State Banks, Trust Companies, Savings Institutions and other classifications recognized by you?

	1919	1923
State Banks	257	317
Trust Companies	328	405
Savings Institutions	10	10

NUMBERS EIGHT AND NINE.

8. To examine the foregoing institutions, how many bank examiners do you employ?

9. What are their salaries?

	Salary
9 Senior Bank Examiners	$3,600
7 Bank Examiners	3,000
5 Junior Bank Examiners	2,400
3 Clerks assisting the Examiners	1,800

24

1 Examiner of Private Banks and Small Lenders	1,800
---	-------

4 Senior B. & L. Examiners	3,600
10 B. & L. Examiners	3,000
3 Junior B. & L. Examiners	2,400

NUMBER TEN.

Q. How do their salaries compare with the salaries paid to National bank examiners and the Federal Reserve bank examiners?

A. The salaries of examiners of this Department are as follows: Junior Examiners, $2,400 per annum; Examiners, $3,000 per annum; Senior Examiners, $3,600 per annum. Examiners are also reimbursed for their traveling expenses.

The National Bank Examiners in the State of New York receive salaries as follows: One at $16,500, two at $7,500, one at $6,500, two at $6,000, three at $5,500, one at $5,000, two at $4,500, one at $4,200, one at $3,900, three at $3,600, three at $3,300, two at $3,000, one at $2,700. Clerks from $1,800 to $2,500.

The National Bank Examiners in Cleveland, Ohio, receive salaries as follows: One at $8,500, one at $5,500, two at $5,000, one at $4,800, one at $4,500, one at $4,200, two at $3,900, three at $3,300, two at $3,000.

National Bank Examiners in Philadelphia receive salaries as follows: One at $10,500, one at $5,500, one at $5,000, two at $4,500, one at $4,000, one at $3,900, two at $3,600, one at $3,500, three at $3,300, two at $3,000, one at $2,400. Asst. Examiners $1,800.

The examiners of the State of New Jersey receive salaries ranging from $3,600 to $9,600 per annum.

Examiners of the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia receive a salary of $4,800.

The traveling expenses of all of the examiners above mentioned are paid, I believe, in addition to the salary.

NUMBER ELEVEN.

Q. Does the Department lose good men, who leave for better fields of employment? If so, why?

A. This question has already been discussed in answering Question Five. In addition, I would say that not only have we lost six examiners during the past eight months, by resignations, to accept better paying positions, but it is only because of his loyalty to me and his interest in the Banking Department, that I have been able to retain the services of my most efficient Second Deputy, Charles H. Graff, whose salary is but $4,000, and who has been offered twice that amount to take up other work.

NUMBER TWELVE.

Q. If you can ascertain the facts, please let us know how the present basis of pay to State bank examiners compares with the pay of Certified Public Accountants and their assistants in well recognized firms.

A. We find upon inquiry that certified public accountants and their assistants, in well-recognized firms, are paid at the rate of from $15.00 to $50.00 per day, for a seven hour day.

If the salaries of the examiners in the Department were paid on a per diem basis, they would be from $8.00 to $12.00 per day.

NUMBER THIRTEEN.

Q. How far have the State Banking Commissioner and his department endeavored, within the past year or two, to change the system of examination for the betterment of State financial institutions?

A. Not only has every reasonable effort been made to increase the force of examiners by the appointment of efficient men, but a policy of appointing young men of lesser banking experience as clerks to the examiners has been adopted. Under this policy, four clerks have been appointed to date, the position carrying a salary of $1,800 per annum. These clerks are able to do a large amount of the detail work of an examination, thus enabling the examiners to devote their attention to the more important matters. I believe this policy will prove to be a valuable innovation in the conduct of the affairs of the Department.

Soon after my appointment to the office of Commissioner of Banking, I began the preparation of a book of instructions for examiners. Upon Mr. Graff assuming his duties as Second Deputy, in December last, the preparation of the instructions was taken up in collaboration with W. T. Grosscup, Assistant Federal Reserve Agent of the Philadelphia Federal Reserve Bank, who is recognized as an authority on the subject of bank examinations. This work is now completed and ready for the printer. I believe it to be the most complete work of its kind in existence, and one which will prove to be of inestimable value to the Banking Department hereafter. By following the instructions therein contained examiners cannot fail to make thorough examinations.

In addition to the book of instructions, we have prepared new schedules for use by the examiners in making examinations, in my judgment the most complete set of forms used in connection with bank examinations. The forms are the result of the scrutiny of the forms used by every Banking Department in the Union, as well as those used by National authorities. The forms include schedules of questions, covering every possible phase of an examination, which must be answered by the examiner, thus precluding the possibility of his overlooking any detail of the examination. These forms are now ready for the printer and will be in use, we trust, within a few weeks from this date.

It is our purpose to file with the directors of every institution examined a copy of the reports made on the above described schedules, in order that they may be informed with respect to every detail revealed by the examination. A reply to the report, to be signed by each director, will be required to be filed in this office, in order that the Commissioner may know that all matters have received the requisite attention.

As has been hereinbefore referred to, in order to make examinations more effective, we have adopted the practice of assigning from two to ten examiners for an examination, instead of one or two as was the former custom, thus enabling the examiners to take possession of every important record and asset immediately upon entering the bank.

We have also adopted the practice of requiring officers and directors to come to the Banking Department, in cases where conditions are unsatisfactory, in order that the importance of correcting the conditions may be more forcibly brought to their attention. These hearings have resulted in inestimable good. Such hearings have been held on an average of two a week, during the past six months.

During the past year, three banks, one trust company and two private bankers have been taken in possession by this Department, because of unsatisfactory conditions. The Mechanics and Merchants Bank, Philadelphia, the Farmers and Mechanics Bank, Honesdale, the City Bank of York, Pennsylvania, were taken in possession because of losses resulting from misapplication of funds which were discovered by the examiners.

During the same period, nine defalcations of comparatively small sums, in additions to those above mentioned, were discovered by our examiners. In most of these instances, the guilty persons have already been apprehended and are serving terms in the Penitentiary.

The discovery of the many defalcations above indicated are unquestionably the results of the improved methods of making examinations.

We have also adopted the practice of calling our examiners together, at more or less frequent intervals, and instructing them in the minute details of bank examination. Pending the printing of the book of instructions and the new forms referred to, printed outlines of procedure are furnished examiners, who are directed to follow every detail of the schedule in making examination.

As evidence of the improved methods of making examinations I submit a few quotations from many letters received by me during the past few months.

From a large Philadelphia trust company:

"I have much pleasure in acknowledging your favor of the eighth instant, and have asked the officers of the Trust Company to give me any suggestions which might occur to them, in answer to your courteous request, but in their opinion the last examination of this Company, by your Department, was handled in a most comprehensive manner.

"Our constant wish is to make the Trust Company one of the best managed corporations in the State, and the help of your Department to do so is much appreciated."

From a large trust company in Pittsburgh:

"We were really highly pleased with the last examination, on account of the fact that we thought your examiners were most careful in every particular."

From a large trust company in central Pennsylvania.

"I beg to say that in my opinion the examinations of our Company, which have been made by your examiners during the past few years, have been very thorough and complete. I think the examiners have been very capable and efficient. I have no criticism or suggestion to make."

From a large Philadelphia trust company:

"I desire to advise you that the last examination made by the Department..... was the best one that has been made of this Company. It proved most helpful to us. Your representatives showed plainly that they had marked ability in their line, and in addition were very considerate of our staff.

"If I might be so bold as to make a suggestion, it would be along this line—that so important a Department as yours should have a markedly larger appropriation and, if necessary, the examination fees raised, so that you may have a larger staff and in this way be able to more frequently examine State institutions."

From a large Pittsburgh trust company.

"From time to time, when it has been suggested that this Company be audited, the executive officers have always said, 'When the State examines us we know that we get a thorough examination,' and I wish to say at this time that the last examination appealed to us very much. It was very comprehensive and very much in detail, and your examiners were very thorough. They went into every detail of the situation and called the attention of the executive officers to a number of things which were immediately corrected....."

From a large Philadelphia trust company:

"It is our opinion that the recent examination of this company was the most comprehensive and thorough that we have yet experienced. It is also our thought that the work proceeded very smoothly and without undue interference with the ordinary routine of business. This opinion was shared in by our auditor and all who had to do in assisting the examiners."

From a large Pittsburgh Trust Company:

"Our officers think that the examination of our institution, made by your examiners, was conducted with a high degree of efficiency. They speak most highly of Mr. who seems to be in charge of the examiners when they come here, and we have no criticism to make in any respect; in fact, everything we have to say is in the way of commendation.

"I believe in your Department generally. A great deal depends on the men who represent you in the various parts of the State. If they are as good as the men who come here, I think you are in fine shape."

From an up-state trust Company:

"The last examination seems to have been of the most thorough and complete kind, and so far as I can at present discover there is nothing I could wish to criticize either in connection with the examination or in the conduct of the examiners."

NUMBER FOURTEEN.

Q. What effect would the bill, reorganizing the State Banking Department (which has now passed the Senate and is in the Committee on Banks and Banking in the House) have upon the condition now complained of?

A. The passage of Senate Bill No. 163, relating to the organization and maintenance of the Banking Department is most essential in order that the necessary expansion of the personnel of the Department may be effected. I deem it of the greatest importance that the salaries of the deputies shall be increased, as provided in the bill, in order that I may retain the services of the present Second Deputy and appoint a Third Deputy.

Your attention is called to the fact that it will be physically impossible for the present office force to handle additional reports, resulting from the contemplated increase in the force of examiners. Under the present law, the Third Deputy can be paid $3,000 per annum, which is entirely inadequate to attract the services of an efficient person.

The passage of Senate Bill Number 163 is, I believe, all that is necessary to enable the Department to do everything humanly possible to protect the interests of the depositors in the State's financial institutions.

Permit me to add, however, that, in order to care for the office work which will result from the proposed expansion of the Department, additional working space will have to be furnished, as we are already hampered by lack of space. We have already overrun our allotted space and are occupying desk room in other Departments.

NUMBER FIFTEEN.

Q. What recommendations has the Commissioner to make under the present conditions, designated to remedy the evils complained of?

A. I believe this question has already been answered in connection with other questions.

NUMBER SIXTEEN.

Q. Will the Commissioner communicate with Mr. Bromley of the House, who is Chairman of the Sub-Committee, and arrange upon a time for a conference between the Commissioner and the Sub-Committee? At the time of such a conference, will you be prepared to enlighten the committee, as far as you can, as to the responsibility of the Directors of the City Bank of York for the recent failure? For example—what part have they taken in the examination or auditing of their bank, either as a board through their own examiners, or in co-operation with the State bank examiners. How far have the Directors, by a proper finance committee, kept close watch upon the affairs of the bank?

A. The Commissioner will arrange to meet the Sub-Committee at any time that it may be convenient for the latter.

A reading of the reports of the last three examinations of the City Bank of York, Pennsylvania, reveals the following:

The Examiner states in the closing paragraph of his report of the examinations, as of November 29, 1918, in which a summary is made of the matters complained of,—“These were all taken up with the Finance Committee.”

The following is quoted from the report of the examination of December 1, 1919,—“Loans—All overdue paper was gone over with the Finance Committee composed of four directors. Large borrowers were claimed responsible by the Finance Committee.

“Collateral loans—Numerous loans secured by local collateral were taken up by the Finance Committee and makers held responsible.”

Examination of February 23, 1921—Report states, “The affairs of the bank seem to have the attention of the board.”

The minute book of the bank shows that weekly meetings of the board of directors have been held, generally with good attendance. There are nine members of the Board and the average attendance has been probably seven members. The minutes, however, are very brief, ninety per cent of them reading substantially as follows:

“The minutes of the last stated meeting and a report of the condition of the bank at the close of business were read and approved. On motion adjourned.”

The finance committee is composed of three members of the board, who are appointed by the president semi-annually. Daily meetings of the finance committee are said to have been held, but no minutes of these meetings appear to have been kept. The directors aver, however, that the committee met daily and passed on all loans. The examiners' reports corroborate this averment.

It has been the custom of the president to appoint an auditing committee, of the board, to make semi-annual audits at the close of June and December. The report of the audit made as of June 29, 1922, reads as follows:

“We have counted the cash and cash items and have found it correct in amount.

“We have examined the discounted paper and have found it correct in amount and properly endorsed.

“We have examined the investments and found them correct and the bank in a solvent condition.

“We recommend a semi-annual dividend of 4½% be declared.”

(Signed by committee of four directors.)

The report of the auditing committee, covering the audit made as of December 28, 1922, reads as follows:

“We have counted the cash and cash items and have found it correct in amount.

“We have examined the discounted paper and have found it correct in amount and properly endorsed.

“We have examined the investments and found them correct and the bank in a solvent condition.

“We recommend a semi-annual dividend of 5% be declared.”

(Signed by a committee of four directors.)

The minute book of the bank will be produced to your committee upon proper request.

HEARING.

Hearing held before the sub-committee of the Committee on Banks and Banking appointed in pursuance with the following resolution:

In the House of Representatives, May 2, 1923.

Resolved, That the special sub-committee of seven of the Committee of Banks and Banking, appointed by the chairman of said committee, is hereby constituted a committee of the House of Representatives to investigate the Department of Banking for the purpose of ascertaining the reasons for the alleged failure of said Department to discover defalcations in State banks, and for the further purpose of discovering any deficiencies in the Department leading to inability of proper examination of State banks, and its present needs in the examination of State banks, and to examine any officers of the Department of Banks and Banking of the Commonwealth and any officers or former officers of any State Banking Institution in the Commonwealth to the end that more thorough, searching and rigid examinations can be made by the Department of Banking for the better protection of depositors.

Resolved, That said committee of the House of Representatives shall have power to hold such hearings as may be deemed necessary to carry out the intent of this resolution. It shall have power to subpoena witness and to require the production of books, papers, records and documents. If any person shall refuse to obey any subpoena issued by the committee, or shall fail or refuse to appear and testify or to produce any books, papers, records or documents, the committee shall forthwith lay the facts before the House for action.

Resolved, That said committee of the House of Representatives shall complete its duties as soon as possible, and make report thereof to the House of Representatives of the session of the General Assembly of one thousand nine hundred and twenty-three.

Resolved, That the members of the said committee of the House of Representatives shall be entitled to be reimbursed for all their actual and necessary expenses incurred in the performance of their duties, and shall have power to allow witness fees and mileage to any persons called before them for examination. The expenses of the committee and the payment of witness fees and mileage shall be provided for by an item inserted in the General Appropriation Bill.

Hearing held in the office of the Commissioner of Banks and Banking, Capitol Building, Harrisburg, Pa., Tuesday, May 8th, 1923, at three o'clock P. M.

Present: Chairman Bromley, A. S. C. Millar, Spangler, Ludlow, Price, Strob, Sprowls.

Chairman BROMLEY: The first witness will be H. Gerber Eaton. By Mr. LUDLOW:

Q. Where do you live?
 A. York, 837 South Duke Street.
 Q. What is your age?
 A. 32.
 Q. What is your present occupation?
 A. Clerk in the City Bank.
 Q. How long have you held a position with the City Bank of York?
 A. About 15 years, between 15 and 16 years.
 Q. Will you state successively the positions held by you and how long?
 A. That would be pretty hard to do.
 Q. Just roughly, or approximately?
 A. To tell you the truth I have done everything from janitor up to teller, and it would be pretty hard to just state how long I held each position. There wasn't any special position that I did hold, just was clerk, and I worked wherever they needed me most, that was general of all the clerks.
 Q. When the bank was taken over by the State Banking Commissioners last month what was your position then?
 A. Why, I was bookkeeper on the cash journal, I had charge of one of the windows, I had charge of the interest deposits, and certificates of deposit which I kept track of.
 Q. Were you receiving or paying teller or did you do both?
 A. Both.
 Q. How long have you been doing that kind of work?
 A. Well, I should say about three or four years.
 Q. And during all of that time have these same men, Baird and Ball, been cashier and assistant cashier respectively?
 A. Yes, sir.
 Q. During that time what, if anything, did you do with the certificates of deposit?
 A. Not more than register them. I would wait on the customers who wished to pay them interest on them, and I registered them and kept track of them, and ran them through the cash journal and the individual ledger, or the journal ledger.
 Q. Was any particular separate book containing a record only of certificates of deposit?
 A. The certificates of deposit register.
 Q. And who had charge of that?
 A. I did.
 Q. What, if anything, did either Baird or Ball do with this particular book?
 A. Well, they didn't have any particular interest with anything in it, that I know of, and all I did was to register them. If I was too busy and could not one of the other clerks would register some. I don't know of any time that Mr. Ball or Mr. Baird did any registering.
 Q. Did your bank keep any separate lists, or separate deposits of savings accounts as such?
 A. Its savings accounts were run in with the general accounts. We had lots of accounts there that were supposed to be savings accounts, that were really checking accounts they were receiving interest on them, and others who were not receiving interest and should be receiving interest.
 Q. Kept all in the same ledger?
 A. No, they had been sorted out and kept in a tray.
 Q. In a tray, who had charge of that tray?
 A. Well, nobody particularly. It was always there, the bookkeepers or whoever had charge of the books back there.
 Q. Just what were the contents of that tray?
 A. Well, there were lots of accounts in there, small accounts, some I imagine running up to pretty good sums.
 Q. Savings and active as well?
 A. There were some active accounts in there, too, some few active accounts that I know of that were in there, that we were paying interest on.
 Q. In other words, there was no method used in your bank to your knowledge to separate active accounts from the savings accounts and keep them separate?

A. No, sir they were not run that way, they were simply opened up in the party's name and filed.

Q. Then if you wanted to take off a trial balance in your bank you would have to take them on the machine, all of those deposits whether they were active or savings?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did those records include as well the memos of the certificates of deposit?

A. No, sir.

Q. Where were they kept?

A. They were kept separate, run through the journal ledger.

Q. And you had charge of that book?

A. Yes, sir. Very often I would be too busy to wait on the windows, and one of the other clerks would get it up. At times every body would be working on it.

Q. What, if any, access to these records did Ball and Baird have?

A. They were around all the time. They received deposits, registered. The tray was not put into a vault; it was out there very often, after banking hours, and we registered certificates.

Q. Is there any book relating to your certificates of deposit known to you which either of them alone had control of?

A. Not that I know.

Q. In other words, during your three years and more of experience with this particular group of records neither Baird nor Ball kept anything away from you men?

A. Not to my knowledge, no, sir.

Q. Do you know of any extra books, or second set of books kept by either of those two men?

A. No, sir, I don't.

Q. Do you know of any substitutions for any books when the examiners would come in?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you personally have access to all of the books and records of the bank?

A. Well, I should say I did.

Q. You did?

A. At different times they would be lying around the desks that you could look in them if you wanted to.

Q. Did your duties call upon you to do so?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were there any books or records in the bank that you were not supposed in your regular duties to work on?

A. No.

Q. What was your custom down there as to taking off trial balances?

A. That is the individual ledgers?

Q. Yes?

A. Well, since I was there I don't think any of the bookkeepers ever have taken off a complete trial balance.

Q. At any time?

A. At no time, no sir.

Q. In all the years you worked there?

A. In all the years I worked there. Mr. Baird, when I first went in there, I just came out of school. Mr. Baird had charge of the ledgers at that time naturally as I worked up, while he would allow me to prove up the ledgers, and after they increased to six or more ledgers or bookkeepers, and when the examiners came in naturally they would start on them, but Mr. Baird would say he would help us straighten them out, and he would get us to run them or call them off. We would be all running off, and possibly he would finish the rest, and more than once we checked off those ledgers for mistakes which evidently was supposed to be there. Evidently he wanted to be sure we were right.

Q. Was there any trial balance taken in your experience there that one of those men didn't take part in it?

A. Mr. Ball, I don't think ever did, but Mr. Baird did; he himself assumed responsibility of the ledgers. At one time I said I would not be responsible for them unless I were allowed to take off a trial balance on them. His excuse was he wanted to see whether we were taking them off, and that he didn't have any way of checking up, and that he didn't know whether we were falsifying any entries or not. Naturally not suspicioning anything we thought it was all right. He was the cashier and the boss, and I having no outside experience, and he was over us, naturally we had to listen to what he told us.

Q. You say, "not having any suspicion," leads us by easy stages to the next question. When Mr. Ferguson, the examiner, came in last month, did you have the slightest reason personally to believe that things inside the bank were not as they should be?

A. No, I had no suspicion at all, outside of that things were run loose.

Q. What do you mean by that?

A. Things were not filed properly, and when I went to look up a record it required as much effort as it did in the beginning to make the record.

Q. What kind of a record?

A. Well, for instance, certificates of deposit was not very good, and in looking up accounts there was always more or less confusion.

Q. Did you ever make any complaint to either of these men about the poor method of keeping certificates of deposit?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever complain to any member of your board?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was there anything ever done as the result of your complaints?

A. Mr. Baird made several trips to Philadelphia and got systems from the Market Street National Bank, and Baltimore, but further than coming back and talking about what he was going to do, and this and that, that is as far as it ever went. Of course, after about a year, somebody else saw that we ought to run this different, and he promised he would look into it, but of course things were going along just as they were.

Q. In your opinion mistakes which were called to your attention and which you thought were due to filing them improperly, were there any substantial errors in the certificates of deposit?

A. No, just in the regular line of work. Suppose a party would come in and say they lost a certificate and wanted another one and they had two or three of them, and they wanted to find out about it, and they wanted me to look up and see whether they had any other certificates there, the only way I had to tell was to go back over my certificate register and look for that name. Sometimes you would not get time to do that for a week or two.

Q. Did you ever have a depositor come in with a certificate of deposit of which you absolutely had no record?

A. No.

Q. Always kept in this book about which you spoke a while ago?

A. Never found any different. Oh maybe a slight difference on the check stubs, but very small.

Q. When examinations were made of the bank by the State examiners were you called in to be of any assistance at all?

A. No, sir.

Q. Are you the teller who is most familiar in your bank with the signatures of your depositors and your borrowers?

A. I could not say—no, I could not say that. Quite a few of them I know, and quite a few I don't.

Q. And yet you are the teller on the window?

A. One of the tellers, yes, there was three of us.

Q. Is the other teller who is here, Jesse Baker, one of those three?

A. Why, Jesse, he helped on the books, and he helped out at the window for the last, I should say six months or a year, and Mr. Sichelstiel, Mr. Ball and myself, were the three other tellers.

Q. Who had charge of the signature cards of depositors and borrowers?

A. The signature cards were in charge of Mr. Sichelstiel, but they say there was never a complete record kept. And somebody would come in and open up an account for a friend, or a relative, and would ask to get a signature card, and very often the signature card was never handed in.

Q. Then you didn't know on the window whether a check handed in was that signed by the depositor, would you?

A. No, sometimes we would not.

Q. Would that frequently happen?

A. No, not so often. We were very well acquainted with the trade and the people around that community, and there was generally someone in the bank that was acquainted with them, that is know them by sight and by name.

Q. How often did your directors meet?

A. Once a week.

Q. Was there any committee of the directors on finance or executive committee?

A. Yes; they met every morning.

Q. How often did they meet as a committee where any record of that meeting was kept?

A. That I could not say. To the best of my knowledge I don't think there was any record kept of the finance committee meetings.

Q. What members of your board were directors, were members of the finance committee during the last, say six months, did you know?

A. Doctor Yost, president, Mr. Julius, and Mr. Mooser. I think that is all. I believe Books was at one time.

Q. Yost, Julius, and Mosser, the three of them?

A. There would be different directors coming in there in the morning, but those three I am positive.

Q. Would they give pretty much attention to their duties?

A. Well, the discount paper stuff was supposed to be passed on by them.

Q. Would they initial the paper on which they passed?

A. I would not be able to say that.

Q. Who had charge of the paper which they passed?

A. Then the notes were taken back, they were run off on the adding machine, and they would stick them in the note files, separating those that were done and those not done. He handed them back; there was not any particular one that would enter them in there.

Q. Did the directors make any examination or audit of the affairs of the bank between the visits of the State bank examiners' representatives?

A. Prior to the definite time, the first of January and the first of July?

Q. Yes; would they make an examination without notice to the cashier and assistant cashier?

A. No, sir.

Q. They would not?

A. No, they would generally. I believe, it was generally before the board at the previous meeting, that they would direct the committee to investigate the affairs of the bank.

Q. Did you ever sit in with the investigating committee, the auditing committee of the board on any of this work?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Occasionally or always?

A. Always; that is only on my part of the work, that is the certificates of deposit.

Q. Just your part?

A. My part.

Q. What major operation in the bank would not be under your control personally, for example?

A. Well, the stock certificates, and the notes.

Q. The bank's investments did not come under your head?

A. No more than making entries in my cash book, and general ledger.

Q. Isn't it a fact that a very large part of the shortage that has developed in your bank was in certificates of deposit?

A. That I don't know.

Q. You don't know?

A. I don't know. I didn't know until this morning where some of the difference was.

Q. If you were told that that was so would it surprise you, if there was a big defalcation or shortage in the certificates of deposit?

A. It certainly would.

Q. And you feel that if that existed you ought to know?

A. I am sure there has nothing occurred in that since I have had those books.

Q. Did you ever see either Baird or Ball take your records at times when there was no reason for it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did they ever when the examiners were present, or the auditing committee of the board was examining act in a manner that struck you as being out of the ordinary or suspicious?

A. No, that was one thing Mr. Baird was, very nervous. Smoked lots of cigarettes, it was not anything unusual for him to be, to say, "Fussed up."

Q. Did your bank ever have outside auditors coming in like certified public accountants?

A. No, sir.

Q. I have here some notes that have been borrowed from the bank examiner and his representatives, and will show you two notes, one of C. E. Bair & Sons, dated February 16th of this year, due 120 days after date, for $5,000, dated at York; and one dated the following day, February 17th, 1923, dated at Harrisburg, at three months after date, for $3,000, and ask you if you have ever seen—if you know either of these notes?

A. That note there I know right away was a forgery. There is no question about it; there is no attempt—

Q. Have you seen these notes before?

A. No, sir; I have not.

Q. You say that note, you mean the note of February 16th, 1923, for $5,000?

A. That note there.

Q. Would you say the same was true of the endorsement on the back of it, H. B. Bair?

A. No, it—I would not say, I am not familiar with his signature.

Q. You are not so sure?

A. But this front here; anybody that knew anything about it, or handled any of the notes, would know that it is a forgery.

Q. You say H. B. Bair, on the back of the note, of the 16th, which you state was clearly a forgery, and the signature on the back of the note of February 17th, the one appearing at the top of the note, and I ask you whether they seem to be the signature of the same person?

A. I would say they were not.

Q. They are not?

A. No, sir.

Q. Which is the incorrect or forged one?

A. This one here (indicating note of February 16th).

Q. You are indicating the same note of February 16th?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The note then for $3,000 dated at Harrisburg, and dated February 17th, seems to you to be a genuine note?

A. It does.

Q. Do you find any initials on that note showing that anybody passed the loan; the initials of any director?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know anything about the loans or credits extended to the bank's customers, or is that out of your jurisdiction?

A. That is out of my jurisdiction.

Q. You would not know that?

A. No, sir; I would not know that.

Q. In the ordinary course of business, as teller, and one having charge of one of the ledgers of the certificates of deposit, you would have nothing whatever to do at any rate with figuring out these notes, and figuring out the discounts originally?

A. No, sir; no more than when a customer would come to me to the window to renew, or pay interest.

Q. I show you similarly two notes, both dated at York, one February the second, 1923, for $4,500, by Simon Feder Co., to the order of Simon Feder endorsed by Simon Feder, and another note dated February 7th, 1923, for $2,000, purporting to be signed by the same Simon Feder Co. to the order of Simon Feder, each one endorsed in blank, and ask you whether either or both of those notes is genuine if you know?

A. That one there is a forgery.

Q. Indicating the note of February 2nd, for $4,500 is a forgery?

A. Yes, that is the forged note. This is the genuine note.

Q. Witness indicates note of February 27th for $2,000 as being genuine?

A. Apparently anybody familiar with these signatures would know it. There was only one thing that I was afraid of, that some of these notes might have gone through my hands, but since I have seen the signatures I am positive that they would never have gone through my hands, because anybody familiar with these signatures would tell in a minute.

Q. Did you ever go into the meeting with the State Bank Department examiner, or the board, or the committee of the board and examine for them the signatures on any notes?

A. No, sir.

Q. No question about that in your presence?

A. No, sir.

Q. You were never asked to verify the validity or authenticity of these papers?

A. Not that I remember.

Q. On the note of February 27th which you say is the genuine one, do you find the initials of any officer of your bank or anyone's initials there?

A. No, sir.

Q. Nothing to show that that was approved or not by the committee or the board?

A. No, sir.

Q. Who kept the minutes of the bank?

A. The minutes were generally made up. If there was anything special in the minutes, there was a note made of it and one of the stenographers would write it up, possibly the next day.

Q. I show you two more notes, purporting to be the notes of Maple Press Co., to the order of George H. Hummel, and H. A. Wisotzky, both dated at York, one dated January 10th, 1923, for $6,000, due 120 days after date, and one dated at York, February 10, 1923, due 120 days after date for $6,000, each apparently endorsed by the parties on the note, and ask you whether either or both of those notes are genuine?

A. That is a forgery (indicating note of January 10th).

Q. Do you say the same of the endorsements of the reverse side of the notes?

A. Positively.

Q. Have you seen any of these six notes that I have shown you previous to this afternoon, or before this afternoon?

A. These here, I have seen the Maple Press note, but I would know at a glance that that was not regular, the numbering and the dates on them.

Q. Do you find anything on the original, the genuine note, to show that it has been initialed by any officer of the bank?

A. No, sir.

Q. What do you mean by saying that you could tell from the forgery by the numbering and the date that it is a forgery?

A. Mr. Ball evidently dated that note, and it is very unusual for him to date notes (indicating note of January 10th).

Q. In other words, who in your bank ordinarily would put down the due date on the notes?

A. Mr. Sichelstiel ran the register.

Q. And was it his duty to work out the majority of the notes, and the interest due?

A. Ordinarily, yes.

Q. And on the genuine note of the Maple Press Company dated February 10th, whose handwriting appears on the note?

A. Mr. Sichelstiel.

Q. And the note of January 10th, which you say is a forgery?

A. Mr. Ball. That note register at times, very often, when George was not there, Mr. Ball would register, and I would register.

Q. Both registered occasionally?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Mr. Eaton, from time to time you personally have been a borrower at your bank, that is correct, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To whom would you make application for your loans,

A. I bought a property some years ago, and I went to the discount committee, that is went in to Mr. Baird, whenever we wanted anything, he would cut us so short, and tell us to see the board, see the committee.

Q. Your application was made to the board and not to the officers?

A. Well, at that time we didn't have a discount committee, what we call a discount committee.

Q. To whom then did you make your applications?

A. Mr. Stauffer, and Mr. Yost, and I don't just recall who the other directors were.

Q. You got that through the directors, and not through Baird and Ball?

A. No, sir. Mr. Stauffer at that time they said if I did not want to borrow it from the bank, he said he would take it personally.

Q. What loans have you outstanding now at the bank?

A. A $2,000 judgment.

Q. Secured by what?

A. A judgment on my property.

Q. What lien is it on your property, the first or second?

A. The first, that is the only thing against it.

Q. What other, if any, loans have you?
 A. There is a small one of about $200 to $225, that I got for a few repairs.
 Q. And you made application for that loan to whom?
 A. Mr. Baird.
 Q. And he O. K'd it?
 A. He O. K'd it.
 Q. How recently was it?
 A. It is about a year, probably more than that.
 Q. At the time you made the application for that loan had you the slightest suspicion, directly or indirectly, of anything in the bank's being wrong?
 A. Positively; no, sir.

By Mr. MILLAR:

Q. What kind of ledgers do you keep, loose leaf ledgers, or bound ledgers?

A. I worked, through my efforts they changed from the old bound ledgers, and then put posting machines in on the loose leaf system. The work is entirely too much to handle by the old system.

Q. When was the change made?

A. I could not just say. I believe it was in 1916 or 1917 when the bank was rebuilt, we changed it, when we were running in a storeroom on West Market street.

Q. What were the permanent records of the ledgers kept in then?

A. That is individual ledgers?

Q. Yes?

A. They were the old bound books that we got from the William Mann & Company. They were a real large ledger, probably ten inches thick.

Q. Not the loose leaf?

A. Not the loose leaf.

Q. You said something had been kept in a tray?

A. Ever since we transferred from the old bound ledgers to the loose leaf there instead of having binders we have a steel tray.

Q. Set up on legs about the proper height to handle?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And your records were kept in trays?

A. That is where the duplicate sets are kept; then there are settlement sheets kept in trays, and then the ledgers which we consider the original record, which we keep there, and they are kept in binders, but they are loose leaf.

Q. What did you refer to when you said that some of our records had been kept in trays as distinguished from other records?

A. Statements which are duplicates of the records.

Q. Statements of the depositors' accounts?

A. Yes, which are exact duplicates of the ledgers.

Q. Do you have savings fund accounts in your bank?

A. We had a book that was supposed to be savings funds, but as I say there was lots of those savings funds mixed in with the regular accounts, as well as a few of them that were kept separate, and in with them there a lot of checking accounts, people who originally opened savings accounts, checked on them, the same as a checking account, there was no line drawn between them.

Q. Would the record of the deposits of the savings fund account be kept in a separate place from the record of the deposits in the checking account?

A. No, sir, they were mixed in with each other.

Q. That in your individual ledger appears both active and savings fund accounts?

A. Both.

Q. If a depositor made a deposit in the savings fund account, would the operation of entering that deposit be the same as the operation of entering a deposit in the active accounts?

A. Both.

Q. If a depositor made a deposit in the savings fund account, would the operation of entering that deposit be the same as the operation of entering a deposit in the active account?

A. For people that had savings fund books, we had a yellow ticket, and for the regular checking account we had a white ticket.

Q. Aside from the color of the tickets which indicated which account it was kept in—?

A. The bookkeepers made an effort to keep those accounts separate, but as I say, people checked on them. The consequence was that maybe a savings account would be opened, and two or three months afterward it would develop into a checking account, and the record was left where it was filed originally.

Q. What was the regulation for a person withdrawing from the saving fund account, could he do it without notice?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could he do it by checks?

A. Yes, sir, by check.

Q. Did he have any limitation as to the number of checks he would be permitted a month?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was there any distinction between the saving fund account and a regular account as to interest?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was there a distinction on interest?

A. I am sure there was. There are some accounts got four per cent., and I know that very often we were put in a delicate position, people would say others are getting four per cent. on their money, and we told them we pay only three per cent. We got into arguments, and of course, we referred them to Mr. Baird, and Mr. Baird settled the arguments and gave them four per cent., and marked the book as such.

Q. Was there any book or tray or records of any kind that Baird could withhold from the bank examiner that would prevent the examiner from learning what the liabilities of the bank were in any amounts?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Were all these records out and available all the time?

A. All there, unless he had some that we knew nothing about.

Q. Are you still working for the banking commissioner?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you found any you didn't know anything about it?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. STROB:

Q. All the deposits that were made in your bank was accompanied with a slip, was it not?

A. Not very often, the majority of the tickets were made up by the tellers?

Q. But every deposit had a ticket with it, either made up by the depositor or the clerks?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. One of your deposit tickets you say was a different color from the other?

A. The yellow ones were there for the people having savings books.

Q. You said you kept a general ledger, did you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When evening came, when you wanted to make your entries in the general ledger, who footed up these deposit slips, and gave them to you?

A. The bookkeepers.

Q. The bookkeepers?

A. Yes.

Q. The one that kept the individual ledger?

A. The individual ledger, yes.

Q. Then the checks that were taken, say that came in in the mails, and came in and were cashed during the day, how were they counted up?

A. By the bookkeepers.

Q. By the bookkeepers?

A. Yes.

Q. They made up a statement and gave that to you?

A. They had a slip, and entered on the slip debits or credits, state of deposits, either debit or credit.

Q. They didn't enter it on your book?

A. No, sir, I entered it myself.

Q. How about your accounts with the banks, with the outstanding banks, when they came in the morning, you sent your list out in the evening, how about that?

A. That was handled by the stenographer, and she had a slip designating the different banks, and the name was or that, and that was sent to them, and that would be entered on my book, that slip was turned over to me.

Q. At the close of the day when the cashier would get up these items, get the deposits and the checks for distribution,—did you have a separate window for notes?

A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't have?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you mix them in with the deposits?

A. No, we kept a separate account for the notes.

Q. Didn't you have a separate window for those notes?
 A. No, sir, when a customer would come to the bank, possibly to renew a certificate, give us a deposit, and very likely renew a certificate, we did all three transactions.

Q. Didn't the note clerk bring his slip up to you?

A. We had a slip at the end of each day's work right there, debit bills, credit bills and discounts which he would hand to me, and I would enter them.

Q. Who made up these statements?

A. The bookkeepers and Mr. Ball, and Mr. Sichelstiel, and the stenographer. The incoming mail, the letters, I would take the amounts from the letters after they had been checked up and verified.

Q. Of course these amounts had all to agree with your cash balance to make your journal ledger balance at the close of the day?

A. I would get up my general ledger, and strike a cash balance, make a cash balance, to Mr. Baird who had charge of the cash.

Q. And he saw to it that this cash balance that you gave to him agrees with the cash?

A. Evidently he did.

Q. He had that all in his own hands?

A. He had that all in his own hands, yes, sir, and if there were any items on the teller's cash book that we didn't know were there or not, it never entered our minds that they were not there.

Q. Didn't you have a lot of cash items which were on the account, carried from day to day?

A. Yes, numerous items, checks that were returned, and different things that came back, sent back, they would have to wait and get in touch with the customers there, and take them off their next deposit.

Q. Could he change any of those cash items, or debit slips, or credit slips, and make them right without your knowing it?

A. Oh, yes, yes, indeed.

Q. That is actually the whole thing came back to either Mr. Ball or Mr. Baird to prove that the bank was right at the time when you closed up, they had that in their hands?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr.

Q. It was said that Mr. Baird discovered Mr. Ball's shortage in 1916, did the other employes of the bank know about the shortage of Ball in 1916?

A. No, sir, not that I know of, I didn't know that, and I don't believe anybody else did, not until I saw it in the paper several days ago; that was the first I knew about that.

Q. Do you know of any directors selling any of his stock about that time?

A. No, I don't. I would not have any way of finding that out.

Q. Was Mr. A. M. Grove a director at that time, or don't you recall?

A. He was at one time, if he was at that time or not I would not be able to say.

By Mr. CAMERON:

Q. You said you worked on the individual ledger?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You made up the deposit slips then, footed them up and gave them to the bookkeeper who was keeping the general ledger at that time?

A. At that time I did.

Q. Mr. Baird received deposits and made entries in pass books?

A. He did.

Q. And often?

A. He had quite a few customers who would not let anybody else but Mr. Baird wait on them, and he would take them back in his office and wait on them back there. He would come out and write certificates, and make an entry of deposits, and as a rule, he would get one of the tellers to count it and make out a slip.

Q. Did he make up a good many deposit slips himself?

A. Yes, I would say he made quite a few deposit slips.

Q. You have quite a number of large deposit accounts in your bank?

A. Yes, we have quite a few.

Q. How large, what is the largest balance?

A. That is a little hard for me to say, because I have not been in contact with the ledger—

Q. What was it when you kept them, about, just the average?

A. We had accounts running to 50 to $30,000, some school accounts $100,000. Now, that is just roughly, it is a little hard to remember just exactly what those accounts were, but they were considerable amounts.

Q. Did you always balance the pass books and the accounts in your ledger when they were brought in for balancing?

A. Not all of them.

Q. Did Mr. Baird make a practice of balancing some pass books?

A. Some pass books we would strike a balance for him and he would figure the interest on them.

Q. Did he always balance certain accounts?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That came in?

A. Like school accounts, and different things, he would generally, he would generally get up those statements himself.

Q. There are quite a number of accounts, were there not, that he reserved the right to balance when the pass books came in?

A. Yes, sir and sometimes he would have the bookkeepers check them up.

Q. When you were keeping books, did you ever find any entries that you didn't make yourself?

A. Oh, yes, it was customary for Mr. Baird, he would very often help out in posting.

Q. Did you ever find any errors in the pass books that he balanced?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever have any debits that had not been properly made?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or credits?

A. No, sir, if there was any credits on those books we always looked at the deposit ticket.

Q. Did you find deposit tickets that were not genuine?

A. I did the other day, after, that was—

Q. Who made those up?

A. Mr. Baird. At the time it was in with the rest of the work, and in tracing it up I found it, Mr. Ferguson and I.

Q. When you usually took this trial balance of the ledgers off you say that Mr. Baird always took part in the final striking of the balance?

A. Yes, one thing we never—

Q. You took the balance off your ledger and handed the total to Mr. Baird and the other bookkeepers did the same thing, and handed the totals to him, and he told you it was so much out, or it was balanced?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when you ran these balances, did you run a balance in this tray that you speak of?

A. They were all run off, yes.

Q. I don't know just what this tray is, is it one of this sort of tables that stand around?

A. A steel tray about this—the tray is about eight inches deep.

Q. What is the difference in appearance between that tray and the usual trays in which the books are kept?

A. Well, now, we have four. I think there is four trays there. There is two trays with the statements for the regular ledgers, and two trays for the savings accounts, which is supposed to be savings accounts, one for the ledger leaves, and one tray for the statement sheets.

Q. There is one tray there that looks different from the others, is there not?

A. No, they are all finished—

Q. I mean the contents of it, does it look the same?

A. There is one tray, yes, that has ledger sheets in, and the other three trays have statement sheets in, there is a difference between the contents.

Q. It is this large one that appears to have contained the accounts that Baird was using?

A. That is what Mr. Ferguson told me this morning. It is evident he ran those off, but didn't include that one tray in the totals.

Q. It has been your custom to keep all deposit accounts in one balance in the general ledger?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have no segregation of savings deposits and demand deposits?

A. No, sir.

Q. So that it was an easy matter for Baird to cover his shortage by requiring the bookkeepers to run off their individual balances and hand their totals to him, and he would check the balances with the ledger?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, with respect to the certificates of deposit, what was your custom, what was your method of handling canceled certificates?

A. Well, I had charge of the books every month, or not just the first of the month, but generally once a month, when I was not very busy, I would run off all the new certificates that were issued from the stubs—

Q. From the stubs?

A. From the stubs, and then I would run off the canceled certificates, and add the total of the new certificates to my previous balance, and subtract the balance of the stubs, and as the certificates were paid I stamped back on the register with the dater when they were registered with the stamp of the dates when they were paid.

Q. These certificates were numbered with a machine?

A. Yes, they are numbered when we get them from William Mann & Company.

Q. How do you file these certificates when they are canceled?

A. Simply put the adding machine slip to them, and rubber band.

Q. You don't file them numerically?

A. No, sir, I had taken that up with Mr. Ferguson and asked him for suggestions in handling, before I knew that there was anything wrong.

Q. You never did take the balance off accurately by going over all the canceled certificates and accounting for the certificates that were not there in their proper places?

A. No, I have never known that since I am there.

Q. Do you know whether there may be a difference in the certificates or not?

A. There could be.

Q. Did the directors ever run a balance off of your certificates?

A. They took my slips.

Q. Checked your slips?

A. Checked my slips with the certificates.

Q. Isn't it the only safe way to check certificates outstanding with the general ledger balance to go over all of the certificates that have been canceled and take the numbers that are not in and compare the stubs of the respective certificates, the total of the respective stubs, with the total of the deposits to see whether or not they are correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is the only way that can be accurately proven?

A. That is the only way we can prove that up. Of course, there may be a difference in the outstanding certificates that you could not check up in that way, but you would know that the records so far as you had them there agreed with your ledger.

Q. And the only way really to prove your ledger with the certificates of deposit is to have the holder of each certificate certify as to the amount of it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And compare his certificate with the stub, the corresponding stub?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. STORB:

Q. What was the procedure in your bank when the examiner came in, what did you do, and what did the examiner do?

A. When the examiner came in I would immediately get up from my work, get our certificates, and cashier's checks, and dividends, and get all that work up for him as quickly as I possibly could, outside of that I had nothing else to do with it.

Q. Did he come and seal up these ledgers?

A. Not my ledgers, no, sir.

Q. Didn't he seal any ledgers?

A. Sometimes came in and got my statements.

Q. Checked your statements?

A. Checked my statement—

Q. And he checked your statements?

A. Got my statements and took them, and later on when he came to my work, I would check back.

Q. Was there any chance when the examiner came for Mr. Baird to slip some of that stuff away, did he have that chance?

A. I would say he would.

Q. You would say he would have?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the examiner didn't take charge of every thing and make everyone of you stand back until he got things sealed up?

A. The examiner generally came in there, and as a rule they took charge of the ledgers and the notes probably and the cash.

Q. How did they take charge of that?

A. They put their seals over the vault, and over the steel cabinets where the notes were kept, the trays, and they immediately started counting the cash.

Q. You just said a minute ago Mr. Baird had time to slip some of those away?

A. He would, because the ledgers were back there, and the bookkeepers would be posting on them, and they would have to finish their day's work.

By Mr. MILLAR:

Q. Describe the room?

A. It is a long narrow room with several booths in the back, and the bank examiner would come in there, and Mr. Baird would be in his office there, and he would stall him, and give Mr. Baird a chance to get away with something, and that door back there, it worked with an electric lock, and when any depositors would come there to go into the vault they would ring the bell, and it would be a little hard for anybody to walk right in there.

Q. Don't you think that some of the clerks would see if Mr. Baird was coming out and running some of that stuff away, would not they see it?

A. I would not think they would, I have been there every time the examiners have come in, and I have never noticed anything suspicious.

By Mr. STORB:

Q. What you call slips, was a sort of a card; wasn't it a card?

A. You mean the tray?

Q. It was in that tray which you referred to that had the saving account in?

A. There are sheets, about ten by twelve.

Q. Ten by twelve?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. About how many sheets would be in there?

A. There may be a thousand.

Q. That would make a pretty big package?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Don't you think they would see the cashier take that away?

A. Positively; if he took that away, they would.

By Mr. CAMERON.

Q. They could not take it away without taking your tray away?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He would have to take your tray away?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. STORB:

Q. What could he do to slip that away from the examiner?

A. I don't know, if he was coming in there at any time he could take it away. Mr. Baird did a lot of night work, I know I have been there, coming back after lunch, he would want to know what I was doing there, and I said finishing up my work, or something like that. He never got very friendly with us fellows.

Q. The bank examiners didn't come in at night?

A. No, they didn't.

Q. What time did they come in usually?

A. Almost any time.

Q. During the middle of the day?

A. Sometimes in the morning, and sometimes in the afternoon.

By Mr. MILLAR:

Q. As a matter of fact he could wheel that thing in a closet or anything, could he not?

A. That would be pretty hard to do.

Q. Was the back of the bank, where Mr. Baird's office was, visible from the front of the bank?

A. No, sir; steel partition about four feet and then glass, When he was seated at his desk in his office you could not see him.

By Mr. CAMERON:

Q. Was Mr. Baird always present when the examiners were taking off the ledgers?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I suppose you or somebody else would tell the examiners and show them where these books or ledgers were?

A. When the examiners would say they were ready for the ledgers they were all carted into the directors' room.

Q. This tray was not carted in there, was it?

A. I would not be able to say that. I would say they were. I never noticed where there would be a possibility that that tray was held back when they took the ledgers back. He would tell the examiners these were all statements in there.

Q. Is it a fact that he did tell them that?

A. That I would not be able to say, because I had very little to do with that up there. Even in calling for the ledgers it was very seldom that I would go back when I was on the books. Mr. Baird would go back with the ledgers and they called them off, or the examiners would call them off, or one of their helpers, and very often when the examiners came in we would start taking off the trial of those ledgers and Mr. Baird would help us. And he would let us know if there was some difference, and I would work there until we found the difference, sometimes we didn't find it, and evidently it was in his addition or I made the mistake.

By Mr. STORB:

Q. Between these sheets and the adding machine and run these things off previously?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Did they allow you to run them off?

A. The clerks ran these off, and Mr. Baird very often. I am sure they would take these slips along with them when we would run the ledger off we would leave the slips on the binder or the trial ledger, then they were turned over to the examiners and Mr. Baird and they would check it up.

Q. If you would want to fool the examiners you could pad your machine and run these slips off, you could check them as all right, and fool the examiners, and you could put on that slip whatever you wanted?

A. Positively could.

Mr. STORB: Of course, you could. That is easy.

By Mr. CAMERON:

Q. They are instructed to do that, of course?

A. When they came there was invariably an adding machine taken into the back room.

By Mr. SPROWLS:

Q. Suppose the bank examiner came in there and asked you to run off, say, for instance, the individual ledger, you have done that for the bank examiner, have you?

A. We were always under the instruction of Mr. Baird.

Q. Would he do that?

A. He would do that, or tell us to do that.

Q. So he would have you do that. Then the bank examiner would either take that slip, and would check the book, or he would call off the amount and you would check?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You could not fool him when he did that?

A. They always checked this up to the best of my knowledge, they did.

Q. You or Mr. Baird?

A. Somebody took this off with the bank examiner, when there was two of them very often they would do it between them.

Q. Was any of the directors ever around when the bank examiners were there, and took part in it?

A. Not with the examiners, they would come in from time to time and go back and talk to them, and I think on several occasions the bank examiners called some of the directors in and talked to them about conditions they found, but so far as taking part in the examinations I don't know of any.

By Mr. STORB:

Q. How many examiners generally came into your bank?

A. Two.

Q. How long did they generally stay to examine it?

A. From three days to a week.

By Mr. CAMERON:

Q. You say they usually took the machine slips away with them?

A. Now, I would not be able to say positively, but Mr. Baird could have destroyed those slips and taken them off. Those slips were taken back there, they were evidently kept back there by somebody, but practically all the auditing was done in the back room.

Q. Mr. Baird looked after the examiners, didn't he, very closely?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And took the ledgers back and took the slips back and all those things?

A. The clerks in front were generally loaded up with enough work and the windows would keep them busy all the time. If we didn't have time to attend to this Mr. Baird sort of supervised the auditing, although he always checked off my cash journal.

Q. Who was authorized to sign cashier's checks and drafts?

A. Drafts Mr. Ball and Mr. Baird were the only ones to sign, but all the clerks were privileged to sign cashier's checks, for the cashier.

By Mr. LUDLOW:

Q. What do you know of the method of living of the assistant cashier and the cashier, did they seem to be living within their means?

A. Well, that was one thing that never entered my mind about their living. When I went in there at a very small salary they were making what appeared to me an enormous sum, and their method of living, Mr. Baird always associated with people of means, supposed to be the wealthiest people that we have in York, and on the surface there was nothing that would create any suspicion. Of course, I never came in contact with Mr. Baird, that is outside of the bank.

Q. Did you with Mr. Ball?

A. Sometimes, yes. He lived in the same end of the town, and I would very often go along home with him, sometimes I would go out in his machine.

Q. Each of those men had a machine?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Of the more expensive type?

A. Mr. Baird had a Cadillac. Recently he had gotten a new one, but the one he had before was an old model. Mr. Ball had several second-handed machines until he got the recent one; this is the first new machine I think he owned.

Q. What kind was it?

A. A Hudson.

Q. Did you offer a higher rate of interest at your bank on your certificates of deposit than they offered at other banks in York?

A. Mr. Baird had some customers that he did, some that I know of that he would pay four per cent., from three and a half to four per cent. on the certificates.

Q. My final question, would you send out statements to the depositors, or would you balance the pass books when they left them at the bank?

A. After they installed the loose-leaf system with the machines, we had a pretty hard time to get depositors to take statements, they wanted the books balanced the old way, though there was the old procedure of balancing some of their books, but we finally did get quite a few of them to accept statements. When we got caught up we would make out the statements, but as a rule, we would wait until the depositor came in to hand them to him at the window.

Q. What would you do with these big accounts, like the school accounts?

A. Those books I think were balanced the old way.

Q. By him or whom?

A. By the bookkeepers.

Q. Not by Baird or Ball?

A. Neither. I would balance the school accounts when I was through. There were lots of checks, the school teachers' checks.

By Mr. CAMERON:

Q. Did they use that system with all the outstanding accounts?

A. Yes, there was supposed to be a statement for every account, savings or checking accounts.

Q. I cannot see how it would be possible to do that in this difference or shortage and not be discovered. I could not see how it would be possible.

By Mr. MILLAR:

Q. They didn't send the statements out, did they. You didn't send statements out?

Mr. CAMERON: Of course, they could not.

The WITNESS: No, not all of them.

By Mr. LUDLOW:

Q. To some of them only?

A. The bookkeepers had a list, and they went through it and sent statements out on the first of the month, the people that wanted them sent, to the few that would accept them, they sent statements out.

Q. The theory was good, but the practice was poor?

A. That was one of the things that was loose. People got one statement, and perhaps there would be another statement preceding that lying there in the bank.

By Mr. CAMERON:

Q. I would like to ask a question about discounts. If a man would come there for a loan what was the procedure?

A. If he was not very well acquainted we would always send him to Mr. Baird or Mr. Ball, and invariably Mr. Baird loaned.

Q. He would talk to him?

A. He would talk to him.

Q. And give him the loan or not as he saw fit?

A. He would very often make a record of it on a slip, who the party was, and put it to the discount committee, or go out and look it up if he was not familiar with the party, if he was not personally acquainted with him.

Q. He had authority to make loans without consulting the committee first?

A. That I would not be able to say.

Q. Did he do it?

A. He did, yes, whether he had authority or not, I don't know.

Q. Did he do it quite extensively?

A. That is more than I am able to say, because I don't know what notes went back to the committee.

Q. Who made up the slips, these sheets that the finance committee passed on containing the record of the discounts?

A. You mean the one passed on by the finance committee?

Q. Yes?

A. The notes themselves were sent back there.

Q. The notes themselves?

A. Yes, as I say, they would turn them back.

Q. Some of them had already been granted and Baird had given the man credit for them, others had not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You don't know the extent to which Baird granted loans without the knowledge and approval of the committee having been obtained?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. MILLAR:

Q. What was done if a man paid a note, who would take it?

A. Either one of the front windows.

Q. Who would be there, at the front windows?

A. Well, Mr. Ball, Mr. Sichelstiel and myself, and when we were busy why the bookkeepers sometimes would help out.

Q. When he paid a note or reduced a note would you give him the note immediately?

A. We ran it through the discount blotter and gave him the old note in exchange for the new one.

Q. Did a man ever pay a note and you found that you could not find the note?

A. No.

Q. So any man that ever paid a note always did get his note back at the time he paid it?

A. Not always. Sometimes they would pay a note, come in there, and he would not want to wait, and we had two or three customers at the window, and they would not want to wait, and they said, mail me the note. There was one man in the typewriter business who had a lot of small notes, and we mailed the notes to him.

Q. Is there any possibility of their being any discounted notes in the possession of the bank at the present time that have been replaced?

A. That I would not be able to say. Notes that had been paid and not returned to the customer?

Q. Notes that had been paid and not returned to the customer?

A. Possibly there are some that have not been returned. There was a drawer in the steel cabinet where those notes were kept, that those notes were in until the customer would call for them, but whether there are any in there or not, I don't know.

Chairman BROMLEY: The next witness is Jesse Jacob Baker.

By Mr. LUDLOW:

Q. What is your age?

A. 28 years.

Q. Where do you live?

A. 955 Wayne avenue, York.

Q. At the time the City Bank of York went into the hands of the State Examiner how long had you been employed there?

A. Eight years.

Q. In what capacity?

A. Well, in the last two years I was supposed to be bookkeeper; for two and a half years Mr. Eaton had been, and I worked on the statements, and then Mr. Eaton was on the ledger at that time.

Q. Were you on the window at all?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you familiar with the signatures of your depositors?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were there any books or records to your knowledge kept solely by Mr. Baird or Mr. Ball?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Did you ever run up a balance or run off a trial balance at any time without their assistance?

A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. How long would it take to run off a trial balance?

A. I could not tell you, Mr. Baird had that done himself.

Q. You mean that as far as you are concerned you took no part in any trial balance?

A. No, sir, he would call on me when the bank examiner was there and I would run off the ledger for them.

Q. At any other time?

A. No, sir.

Q. When you finished for the day did you take any part in balancing up for the day, that is the cash?

A. No, sir, no more than if there was a difference to check it up. If there was any difference in the cash I helped to check it up.

Q. Did Mr. Baird take part in that?

A. No, sir, he did not.

By Mr. CAMERON:

Q. When you would finish for the day he would tell you whether you were out or whether you balanced for the day, and in the balancing for the day did you take any part in that?

A. No more than to see that the amounts of the checks checked up.

Q. That was your job?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have anything to do with the notes or certificates of deposit?

A. I wrote a few up when I went to the window when the other boys would go out to lunch.

Q. To what extent did the directors of the bank to your knowledge supervise the work being done in the institution?

A. Well, there was a committee coming in there every morning at ten o'clock, and that committee was supposed to pass on all notes handed in for discount, and every Tuesday morning there was what they called a board meeting at ten o'clock.

Q. How long would the board be in session?

A. Usually an hour, between ten and eleven.

Q. What about the length of sessions of the committee that met every morning?

A. Usually about one hour.

Q. Who was on that committee in the last several months?

A. Doctor Yost, Mr. Julius and Mr. Mosser.

Q. And they gave voluntarily of their time every day?

A. They did, provided they were not sent out with some business to attend to.

Q. And did they pay the directors for their services?

A. They paid them a very small amount.

By Mr. LUDLOW:

Q. To your knowledge, did either the cashier or the assistant cashier seem to be living beyond his means?

A. Well, Mrs. Baird was a Kline, and I didn't have any suspicion of anything. The Kline's were pretty well fixed, and the home she lives in belongs to her.

Q. How about Ball?

A. Well, his wife was pretty well fixed; he married a Stchler, and when the Mrs. died his wife got quite a bit of money.

Q. Then you think both of the men seem to be living within their means?

A. Yes, I never had any suspicion of anything wrong.

Q. Had you at any time during your employment by the bank noticed anything or had you seen anything happen which led you to believe that things were not being run the way they should be?

A. No more than the Monday the bank examiners came.

Q. When the examiners arrived?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The next morning the bank was closed?

A. I think so.

Q. What occurred to make you think there was something wrong on Monday morning?

A. When I came in on Monday morning I went and asked Mr. Baird who was there with Mr. Ferguson and Mr. Ferguson was running up some notes. I asked him the question and stood there a little while and Mr. Baird asked me something about cash, then Mr. Ferguson said something about the penitentiary and looked at me and winked, and Mr. Baird got very nervous, and I thought something was the matter or he would not be talking about the penitentiary.

Q. You did not learn from their conversation why he should have said anything about the penitentiary?

A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. Did you go back to business that day just the same?

A. Yes, sir, I went about my business on Tuesday morning when I came in there; I came in about a quarter to eight. Mr. Ferguson and Mr. Baird were in the vault, and Mr. Baird must have admitted that things were not the way they ought to have been, and when Mr. Baird came out of the vault I held an insurance policy that he was transferring, and I said, "Mr. Baird, here is that policy", and he said, "It will not be any good to me." I said, "Why?" He said, "I will be in jail", and goes out the door serious.

Q. Mr. Baird did not say anything to anybody and you know nothing except what Mr. Baird said to you?

A. That is all.

By Mr. STORB:

Q. Do you know whether the examiners immediately took possession of the ledgers and started to run the deposit ledgers?

A. As I recall it I don't believe they did. They had been run off two or three times.

Q. They had to run them off?

A. Yes, sir, and Mr. Grisley ran off the savings tray on Monday morning.

Q. He began to run them off?

A. Yes, sir, a special man was sent in there and he started on the savings tray.

Q. They did not ask you fellows to help them?

A. On Monday night Mr. Baird called up my house but I had gone to Lancaster with a bowling team to bowl. Mr. Baird called up and wanted to know whether I could come in.

Q. The examiner did not ask you?

A. No, sir, he did not.

Q. But that was the practice and custom to have you run them off?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Possibly he wanted you to do that again?

A. Yes, sir, I ran them when I was there, and Mr. Eaton ran them, but before we balanced he would say, "You boys are tired, I will finish the rest."

Q. That was the usual practice?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. STORB:

Q. When the examiners came in did you run these off for the examiners?

A. These slips were used by the examiners.

Q. Did the examiners run them off?

A. No, sir.

Q. When Mr. Ferguson came there he took a different procedure and did that himself?

A. Yes, sir, he did.

Q. He did not call on you?

A. No, sir, Mr. Baird asked whether he wanted the boys to take off the trial of the ledgers, and he said no.

Mr. CAMERON: Is it in accordance with our instructions. It looks before like they let the men in bank run them. We have found that under former management in such cases it was customary to take the machine slips of the office and they would not run them up themselves, but under our instructions now, ever since I have been here, for the last four months, the instructions have been to run up the sheets and take off the balance themselves.

By Mr. STORB:

Q. Some years ago, before Mr. Ferguson made this examination, was there any chance that Mr. Baird could take some of these sheets on which you kept the deposit accounts and slip them away until after the bank examiner had gone?

A. He may have.

Q. Do you think he did that?

A. I am not sure whether he did that or not.

Q. He did have a chance to do that?

A. He could have, it was a loose-leaf ledger.

By Mr. CAMERON:

Q. Were you running the ledgers?

A. I was on the posting machine.

Q. Did he occasionally transfer accounts from your book to another book?

A. No, he did not, no, sir.

Q. He did not take savings accounts out of one book and put them in another book?

A. When a new account would be opened he would direct where the account was to be put, whether in the savings account or checking account.

By Mr. STORB:

Q. When these deposits were made you had two classes of deposit slips?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then if there was a yellow slip or a white slip, the bookkeeper would know by the slips into which account it would go and not by what Mr. Baird said?

A. The deposit would be made at the window and if there was a yellow slip would be put in the savings account.

Q. Then, the bookkeeper would have to put it in the savings account?

A. The majority of times Mr. Baird would have authority to open up the account and he would come to us and tell us where to put it.

Q. Didn't you have one ticket, a white ticket for the checking account and a yellow slip for the savings account?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then what was the use of having the slips if you didn't go by the color of the slips?

A. They were used to designate the difference in the rates of interest.

Q. But you kept the checking and savings accounts in the same book?

A. No, sir, in different books.

Q. But you must have separated them according to the colors of the slip?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then Mr. Baird could not have told the bookkeepers where to put it, if it were yellow slip it could not go in the checking account?

A. All interest-bearing accounts would go in there.

Q. In the checking account?

A. Yes, sir, the majority of them were kept there.

Q. But the savings accounts bore interest?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you say you kept them all in the active accounts?

A. No, sir, in the savings account.

Q. The interest accounts were all kept in the savings account?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Not in the checking account?

A. No, sir, once in a while where a manufacturing concern carried a large balance we would allow daily interest on that.

By Mr. CAMERON:

Q. Who would figure the interest on these accounts?

A. Mr. Baird would, and I figured on the small savings accounts.

Q. But he would figure on the large ones?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. SPROWLS:

Q. You stated a few moments ago that once in a while Mr. Baird would designate that he wanted this deposit to be put in a certain book, did you or did you not?

A. He designated where to put it.

Q. Well then, are there more than the two books that you know of?

A. Oh yes, we had six ledgers; there were six books there.

Q. What I mean is this, were there more than three of the checking account and three books of the savings account?

A. Oh no, they would not be divided that way, but there were six books in all.

Q. Do you know if Mr. Baird kept any separate books, whether there was any separate books?

A. No, sir.

Q. But he sometimes made the entries himself?

A. He did.

By Mr. STORB:

Q. When you ran up your slips did you run up your white slips and yellow slips separately?

A. No, sir we ran them altogether.

Q. And handed them over to the general bookkeeper?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The same as you did with the checks?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any difference between your checks on the checking account and on the savings account?

A. No, sir, none at all.

Q. And when you ran them up you handed them over to the general bookkeeper?

A. Yes, sir, I ran them up and checked them to prove them.

Q. So that when the balance was taken it would have to have so much checks and so much in cash to balance?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who had charge of balancing the cash?

A. Mr. Baird, he was the one, and Mr. Sichelstiel was his assistant and helped him.

Q. He could have manipulated that cash to make it agree with the balance?

A. Mr. Baird could?

Q. Yes?

A. Yes, he had charge of the cash.

Q. So he could take your balance and the cash and make it agree, don't you know that?

A. Yes sir.

Q. And his judgment would be the final judgment as to whether it was correct or not?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. LUDLOW:

Q. Mr. Baker, what is the amount you have at the bank now of your own personal loans?

A. One of $911, one of $250 and one of $685.

Q. How much of that is secured?

A. All of it is secured, and at the present time this $685 is secured on a mortgage.

Q. How much of a mortgage?

A. That amount.

Q. What, if any, security has the bank for the $911 and the $250?

A. The property.

Q. To whom did you make application for these loans?

A. To Mr. Baird. On this last loan of $911 Mr. Baird said would be all right, and he took it back to the committee, and Mr. Julius and Mr. Baird had a dispute about it and Mr. Julius said that this would be the last loan.

CHAIRMAN BROMLEY: The next witness will be Dr. Jeffrey B. Yost, President of the City Bank of York.

By Mr. LUDLOW:

Q. You are president of the City Bank of York?

A. That is what they say.

Q. For how many years have you been president of the bank?

A. Since 1914, I think.

Q. Were you a director prior to that time?

A. Since the beginning of the bank.

Q. When was the bank formed?

A. In, I think it was 1887.

Q. Doctor, how old are you?

A. I am in my eighty-seventh year.

Q. Your residence is where?

A. York.

Q. What street and number?

A. 263 East Street. Last March I was eighty-six years old.

Q. How often did your board of directors meet in the City Bank of York?

A. Every week.

Q. Was there usually a quorum present?

A. Nearly every time.

Q. What were your director's fees for attendance upon these meetings?

A. For a number of years two dollars a meeting.

Q. Recently what was it?

A. Five dollars.

Q. What kind of an executive or finance committee does the bank have?

A. You mean the number?

Q. Yes, the number?

A. Three.

Q. And who composed that committee for the last several months?

A. Julius, Musser and myself,—I believe that is all.

Q. How often would that committee meet?

A. Every day.

Q. And how long each day?

A. Generally about an hour.

Q. Would any record be kept of the work done by that committee?

A. No, excepting at our weekly meeting.

Q. At the weekly meeting what kind of a report was presented from that committee to the board?

A. I hardly know how to answer that question.

Q. Was it written or verbal?

A. Verbal. We reported what notes had been discounted; and those we were not sure of being all right we reported to the Board of Directors, and let them decide.

Q. Would the report be made by you, or Mr. Baird or Mr. Ball?

A. Well, made by the committee. I suppose Mr. Julius did the most of it since my hearing is so bad. I think that is correct. Mr. Baird frequently came in and we would consult with him.

Q. Did Mr. Baird take part in your daily meetings of the committee?

A. Well, he got in for some time almost every day, but he would not stay the entire time.

Q. Did Ball come in at all?

A. No, only a few times; he came in when Mr. Baird was away.

Q. Did you initial notes that the committee approved—put your initials or anybody's initials on them?

A. No.

Q. Just what did you, as directors, do in the bank, besides holding these morning meetings or your weekly meetings of the board? Anything else?

A. Well, we discussed different things that turned up, but there is no discussion that I can recall.

Q. Did you repose a very large measure of confidence in Mr. Baird?

A. All the confidence in the world.

Q. How long had he been with you?

A. Well, I can't—I don't remember.

Q. For a number of years?

A. Oh, yes, for a number of years.

Q. What was his salary at the time of this trouble a month ago?

A. Five thousand dollars a year, but it was increased to that in January.

Q. Of this year?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he seem to be living within his means or not?

A. That I could not tell. I suppose he was living within his means; apparently he was not so very extravagant. Of course I could not tell about his household affairs.

Q. Was there anything at any time during the course of the last few years to put you on notice, or was there any suspicion that things were not right in the bank?

A. Nothing at all.

Q. Did you know anything about the trouble is supposed to have had with your district attorney some time ago? Any suspicious acts on his part?

A. That was before I was president. Do you want the details of that? Mr. Stauffer was living then, and he and I were quite intimate in business affairs, and one day he said it was reported to him that Mr. Ball was seen with a lady who was not very reputable, and he told me of course the first opportunity he had, and we both agreed that would not do, so we concluded to report to the president, Mr. Solomon, who called Mr. Ball before the board. He came before the board and Mr. Solomon, the president, commenced to talk to him and he told him what he had heard, and he told him that if he ever heard any other report of that kind he would be dismissed. Further than this fact I never heard anything against him.

Q. You never heard of him being accused of embezzling money from your bank?

A. Nothing of the kind. He was straight and perfectly honest at that time, and we never heard anything after that. If I had, or any of the directors had heard anything, he would have been dismissed at once.

Q. Then until Mr. Ferguson, the state bank examiner, came in a short while ago, you had no idea at all that anything was wrong?

A. Nothing; not the least bit. Just the day before the bank closed I was in my place of business fixing up an account, or deposit, and my son came in and said, "Father, what are you doing?" I said, "I am getting this ready to take it to the City Bank." He said, "It is no use to go there, the bank is closed and there is a large crowd around it." That is the first suspicion I had of it. The day before I deposited what money I had myself, it made me a little short with my weekly payroll.

Q. Did you and your committee examine the notes that came in each day?

A. If they were presented.

Q. Who presented these notes to you for action?

A. Mr. Baird.

Q. Would you know, when you met, whether the loan or credit was made upon the customary application?

A. When he reported the notes to us we would decide who should be given credit.

Q. I show you a couple of notes which I have here, and ask you to look at this note of the Maple Press Company, dated January 10th, of this year. Do you recall ever having seen that?

A. No. I don't recall. I might have seen it, but I cannot tell positively. There were so many of these notes coming in right straight along that I could not keep a record of them.

Q. I show you a note of the Maple Press Company, one month later, February 10th, for six thousand dollars, and ask you if you recall having seen that?

A. I don't believe I can, I might have seen it, but I cannot say positively.

Q. Will you look at the two notes together and see if there is any reason in your mind to doubt their genuineness, whether either one is a forgery, or both of them?

A. I could not positively say. There is such a difference in handwriting, even in my own signature.

Q. Did you ever call in your tellers to identify signatures?

A. No. Several notes were presented, I forget whose they were, I cannot recall them, where there was a suspicion they might have been forgeries, but I don't know whether they turned out to be forgeries or not.

Q. You did not know that until the examiners came in?

A. No, no.

Q. Who kept the minutes of the board meetings?

A. Charles Moul.

Q. These minutes were never very long were they?

A. No, just merely the transactions.

Q. So that the committee of three made a verbal report to the board each week on these notes, and so forth, and the secretary kept the board minutes?

A. Yes, sir, but I can't recall whether he checked off the notes that were discounted or not.
